

John has worked in the Information Security field for over 25 years. During his career he has led international enterprise security programs across various industries. The industries include financial, healthcare, telecommunications, entertainment and educational sectors. He has also led and developed the security services teams within top professional services firms. John currently is responsible for the Security Architecture team at the Federal Reserve Bank and is based out of in Richmond. Prior to the Federal reserve, John served as member of the faculty at NYU, both developing and instructing courses where he also later served as the Assistant Director of Computer Services. John has served as security representative to the European Union for an international telecom firm, published articles and spoken on matters of information security for both large and small venues.